Frozen Body of Suicide Farmer Is Discovered

HUDSON BAY JUNCTION, Jan. 11.—Frozen stiff, the body of Frank Ogden, Great War veteran and farmer at McElhanney, 30 miles southwest of here, was found on the floor of his farm home last Thursday. The throat had been slashed with a razor, and a bullet wound in the head, inflicted with a .25 calibre rifle found near the body, was discovered.

Suspects that all was not well at the Ogden farm were aroused by 11-year-old Bobby Abbot, who is employed by George Bateman, McElhanney district farmer. The boy noticed there were no tracks leading to the farmhouse. He informed Bateman, who investigated, but was stopped from entering the farmhouse by Ogden's dog.

Constable R. Z. Rathwell, of the Hudson Bay Junction detachment, R.C.M.P., investigated, and Coroner Cumberland found no inquest necessary. It was judged Ogden had been dead since January 4.

Special significance would attach to this year's convention, it was said, because of the launching by the National Employment Commission of its $20,000,000 home improvement loan plan.

Calgary Chinese Stage Track Sit-down Strike

CALGARY, Jan. 11.—A score of destitute Chinese staged a "sit-down" protest in the middle of the street car tracks on Eighth avenue, the city's main thoroughfare late Saturday afternoon.

The Orientals, homeless and receiving but $1.12 a week from the Alberta Relief commission, squatted between the car tracks, holding up tram and motor traffic as a threat of Saturday shoppers lined the sidewalks to view the unusual protest.

Police soon removed the demonstrators. No arrests were made. It was the first "sit-down" protest in the history of Calgary.

Young Driver's Father Mulcted for Insurance

TORONTO, Jan. 11.—Because he allowed his son who is under 16 years of age to drive his motor car, at the time of the accident, James J. Denry was ordered at Chancery Hall Saturday to reimburse his insurance company for the $1,000 it had paid out in claims arising out of the accident.

The Guildhall Insurance Company, Limited, claimed Denry broke the terms of his personal liability and property damage insurance policy by allowing the youth to drive the car.

White Denry's son was driving, the car collided with one owned by Felix Hubka, whose son, Leo, was injured. In the trial at Chancery, the insurance company defended the suit, settled for $1,000. Then it sued Denry for the amount of the claim because he had broken his insurance contract. The company was allowed the claim and costs.

SUBBURY HOTEL DRENDS A N $250,000 FIRE

Many of 60 Guests Escape
Flames in Night
Active

SUBBURY, Ont., Jan. 11.—Fire gutted the three-story New American hotel here early Sunday, causing $250,000 damage and sending about 60 guests and employees scurrying from the 40-year-old building, some of them in night attire.

Manager W. Plangon and his wife, all in night attire, carried their child from the flaming building several women ran down the back fire escape, screaming while other guests ran down the wooden stairways.

CRACKED EMB. Chief Constable D. Louden was struck by falling bricks, when he rushed to the rescue of Volunteer Fireman A. R. Cooper, manager of the Loblaws' Groceries, as the entire wall of the three-story structure toppled.

Fireman George T. Noble suffered minor injuries to his hip as he crawled to safety from the top of the wall.

Flames were brought under control about 10 a.m. A few of the bare walls remained standing and small fires continued to break out until evening.

It was the third fire to hit the hotel since 1905. Most of the guests' belongings were lost in yesterday's flames. Damage to the hotel was estimated at $125,000 and another $100,000 damage was caused to three stores and a restaurant on the ground floor. The hotel is owned by J. P. Collins of Ottawa, who left immediately for here with the intention of building a new hotel of from 75 to 100 rooms according to an Ottawa dispatch.

ACTRESS HAS BATH INVIEW OF AUDIENCE

First Nighters Along With Censor Enjoy the Experience

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—One of the sprightliest scenes in the Broadway showup today is one in which Betty Lawford, daughter of Ernest, nonchalantly takes a bath in full view of her audience. It occurs in the man-less play, "The Women."

PROPERLY RETURNED Long before the opening in Philadelphia it was known the script called for an actress to take a dip in the tub. Broadway refused to believe the scene would remain in the comedy beyond the opening night, and truth to tell, though the censor is a little doubtful.

Playgoers were properly stunned to see a fair daughter of Venus soap herself before their very eyes, they enjoyed the experience along with the censor, who found nothing scandalous about this stage adventure.

Blaze New York took the scene pretty much in stride, though obviously enjoying the novelty.

NARRES USE OF TUB Many suspected scenic trickery. Others, however, believed that Miss Lawford was clothed for the bath. Both were wrong, for the actress actually makes full use of the tub.

However, instead of being immersed in water she lies in a sea of soap bubbles, pumped into the tub by an electric blower through a tube. That, down front or in the balcony, the audience sees a shoulder, head, arms and one faintly, waving limb along with the great mass of bubbles.

Playgoers Frank Hughes, responsible for the contraption, is certain the electric pump will not break down. What would happen if it did, and the supply of bubbles be cut off, he said "would be too frightful to contemplate."

ROME, Jan. 11.—Italy is opposed equally to either German or Russian domination of Spain, Morocco or the Mediterranean, the political review Il Mondo declared today in a front-page editorial.

German penetration of Spain and Morocco is a problem which arose dramatically before the Great War," the review said.

But Germany today, although opposed to European problems, reinforces her diplomatically, but this does not mean, the review said, if she doesn't want Italy, could desire the return of the Latin race.

Observers here regarded the article of great significance and timed it a strategic moment, because of Italy-German co-operation thus far with regard to Spain and Morocco, reports of German aspirations in Spanish Morocco.

The Holiday Mystery

CHAPTER XXV

DAYLIGHT was just dawning when Coroner Beesling and Sheriff Buckley arrived at the hacienda. Immediately the household came under the jurisdiction of the law. Tante Josephine's death was due to apoplexy, the coroner said, brought on by some unusual excitement—probably her nephew's death.

The confused murder lay where he himself had fallen, victim of the sacred knife, and when they went to the Indian room to accuse him of the crime, they found that he was dead. Of a heart attack, the coroner decided again. No one questioned this opinion, though Bob and Pearl John had their own ideas on the subject.

The hidden panel in the basement wall seemed to make a deep impression on the two officers. They asked why it had been put there, and what use the family had made of the hidden room beyond. Pearl John answered that it had been a whinn of the builder of the hacienda and that no one went into them except on rare occasions.

He was unable to explain, however, that the reason the Indian killed Ramon was because he had found him lying in the room. This was easily understood, as New Mexico officials, they knew how strongly the Indians cling to their ancient customs and beliefs, and how much they resented deprecation of their people.

Pearl John said that the reason for the murder of his older brother had been robbery, and there had been witnesses present when Ramon had been found.

After a great deal of interviewing of everyone in the house, and taking copious notes on the case, the officers departed, giving permission for all concerned to leave the mesa if they reported in Santa Fe for an inquest. As the official car chugged away through the snow, the tension that had held the household relaxed. Once more the hum of voices sounded from the servants' quarters and in the front of the house the feeling of relief was evident.

After the first shock over Ramon's death, Angelique was able to tell how she had found the secret panel. She did not seem in the least shaken over her reason for making Betty a prisoner.

"I thought Ramon loved her," she said simply, as though that was explanation enough. "For anything. Now there is nothing left for me but to go into the church."

Betty ran to her and impulsively grasped her arm. "It came out all right, Angelique," she said. "I forgive you, I won't hurt."

Angelique shook her head. "It can never be anything but wrong to me to have sinned that way. I'll not know a moment's peace on this earth as long as I have such a thing on my soul. I did hurt you, Betty, but I hoped you would die when I pushed you through that doorway. I was mad with jealousy and I would gladly have strangled you with my own hands if it would have made Ramon my slave."

"But there will be other men, Angelique," Bob began, then, gazed and looked at Betty. He knew very well that there could be no one else for him. He turned to the dark-skinned Spanish girl with pity in his eyes. "Try to believe that Betty didn't hold anything against you, Angelique."

She took up Angelique's arm and gently led her away. Now that the mystery of the mesa had been explained, he was again thoughtful, kindly but he had seen on Christmas Eve. How long ago that gay party seemed now, and how the strenuous changes had taken place since that Christmas snow storm had held them all prisoners in the hacienda!

Bob was thinking of this as he drew Betty into his arms and softly, "When and if I can get a job, Betty, will you marry me?" Some other fellow is probably making that big order of tires I started out to get, but there must be something open or a fellow who's desperately in love with the prettiest, most wonderful girl in the world."

She did not answer for so long that Bob tilted up her face. In sudden pain, then her smile reassured him. "It was afraid you put it that way," she said. "Remember, I haven't anything either on my mind as well as your fabulous fortune. But why put it on a money basis, Bob? I'll marry you if you never expected to have another penny as long as you live. Sometimes I've wondered if I ever would meet the right man—that girl who wonder that you know, I certainly didn't dream that Thunder Mesa was going to give me the finest fellow I ever met."

"Stop right there before you say something to spoil it," he interrupted. "Just once in a lifetime a man gets the chance to hear someone else say what he's always thought about himself, and when it comes from you, darling!"

A polite cough from the doorway made them both turn. Pearl John came into the room, hesitating. "I was afraid you were as usual," he said. "I was afraid you were as usual, but I've got to talk to you before you leave."

"Sure thing. Don't mind us, de Four," Bob answered. "Betty has promised that she'll take me on as an assistant if I can manage to find a living for us both."

"So I imagined," Pearl John smiled rather wistfully. "You're luckier than you realize, Bob. Absolutely he walked over to the fire and put another log on the blaze. When he came back he had himself in hand once more. 'The job end of it was what I wanted to talk about,' he went on. 'I've got the situation and you have the practical business experience. Why not join forces?'"

"Oh, not on Thunder Mesa," Betty cried. "I couldn't!"

"I'm leaving this place, too, Betty," Pearl John told her. "There is no reason now for me to stay. Anywhere that you decide on is okay with me. I'll just close the place and let nature do the rest. The winds and the weather will soon attend to its finish. Probably the ancient pueblo walls will crumble the rest, which is really as it should be."

Betty looked at them earnestly. "Do you remember what Professor Shaw said when we went to his room? About queer things happening that he couldn't explain, where old ruins had been disturbed? May be that was all this had to happen here on the mesa."

Neither of them answered, but something in their manner told that they agreed. Bob expressed it when he said, with an effort to make his voice calm, "I guess Thunder Mesa has got the goat of us all. Maybe it would be best to let them, wouldn't it?"

"THE END"

"I want some grapes for my sick husband. Do you know if any poison has been spread on those you have?"

"No, mum; you'll have to get that at the chemist."
